2.1 Survival

A few years ago, Rory and Chiara Maddocks and Rachel Hodson lost their way in a rainforest in central Malaysia. They didn’t have any food or drink, and they were tired and scared. The forest was beautiful, but it was dangerous, with many wild animals and rainy weather.

How did the three friends survive? They followed tips from Ray Mears’s Extreme Survival programme on TV. They walked to a river until they saw the sea. They swam and they tried to find help. Luckily, some boys on a boat rescued them. After two nights in the forest, they were safe.

When he got home, Rory said he wanted to watch more Extreme Survival. ‘You never know when you might need it!’

In 2009, nine-year-old Grayson Wynne spent 18 hours alone in a forest in eastern Utah, USA. He survived – thanks to TV adventurer Bear Grylls. Grayson and his family were on a camping holiday. On Saturday, Grayson went for a walk by himself. He put some food in his rucksack before he left. But he didn’t take a map! Grayson was a big fan of Bear Grylls’s books and TV shows, and he knew what to do. Bear said that it was important to help people to find you, so Grayson left pieces of his yellow jacket on paths and in trees. Rescuers found Grayson after they noticed the yellow material.

When Christopher Traverse’s snowmobile broke last winter, the Canadian was worried. He didn’t know where he was, and he didn’t have a mobile phone with him. Luckily, he remembered a TV show called Survivorman. As part of the show, a man called Les Stroud stayed in many wild, dangerous places. Christopher decided to use some of Les’s ideas. He slept in shelters which he made out of trees, and he drank snow. He got up each day at dawn, and he walked until it grew dark. Four days later, he found a road, and a way home.

Past simple & Past continuous

We often use the past continuous and the past simple in the same sentence. This shows that an action happened while a longer action was in progress:

We were driving through a safari park (a) when some monkeys jumped on the car (b).

The (1) past continuous / simple describes the shorter, completed action.

The (2) past continuous / simple describes a longer action that was in progress at the time.

We often use the (3) past continuous / past simple with while:

While we were talking about what to do, Agata opened the door of the tent.

We can use two verbs in the past simple to show that one action followed another:

Agata opened the door (a) and a cow put its head in (b). (= first Agata opened the door and after that, the cow put its head in.)

We often use linkers like and, then and so with the (4) past continuous / past simple to introduce the second action.

So we put the tent up quickly, then we went to bed.

See page 141 for grammar reference and more practice.

HOLIDAY REVIEW

When we booked our holiday, my husband and I were really excited. We are both quite adventurous people, so trekking on the island of Borneo seemed like our dream holiday. Unfortunately, it was more like a nightmare!

We travelled in summer, so we were expecting hot, sunny weather. But when we arrived at the airport, it was raining. It rained for fourteen days! We walked for more than 10 kilometres every day, but we didn’t see any interesting wildlife – only dangerous snakes! Our tour guide, Azman, wasn’t very reliable. On the first day he was two hours late. Then he lost our map while we were following a river. We were walking until midnight that night!

By the end of the holiday, we were tired and fed up. Borneo was beautiful. But the best part of our holiday was going home!
